

YOU NEED TWO NEWSPAPERS

You enjoy your weekly. It gives you news of your own friends and neighbors. It deals intimately with the problems of your own district and works assiduously for its welfare. As your home newspaper it has first claim on your interest and your loyalty—and rightly so.

But, while your weekly gives you a resume of the news beyond your own district and, within its scope, deals capably with world events, it cannot possibly keep you in touch with every matter of importance. Frankly it makes no claims to do so.

To have an intelligent appreciation of what is happening in the world today you must read a daily newspaper. A good daily gives you all the news. No matter what your chief interest may be, world events, national conditions, sports or markets, it covers them all. And more than news. Special articles, features of particular interest to women and pages for the children make a daily newspaper welcome in every home.

By all means read your weekly. It deserves your interest and support. But remember, you and your family need a daily newspaper, too.

WEDDING

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bignell, Youngstown, Alberta. Thursday afternoon, Nov. 3rd at 5 o'clock, when their third daughter, Annette was united in marriage to Edward Thos. William of Viking, Alberta. Mr. Williams is the youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Williams, Einas Mawddroy, Wales. Rev. H. A. Whaley, minister of the Youngstown United church, tied the nuptial knot in the presence of the family of the bride all of whom were home for the happy occasion. The bride's gown was blue taffeta floor length, with navy blue velvet jacket.

After signing the register the happy party sat down to a sumptuous wedding breakfast which was served by the bride's mother. The happy young couple left for Viking by motor Friday morning where they will make their home. Mr. Williams being engaged in farming in that district. Their many friends wish them many years of happiness and prosperity.

Messrs. George Anderson and Earl Robinson are Calgary visitors this week.

Rond About Town

Did you notice the pretty young married lady that one of our out-of-town bachelors had on Friday night? We were wondering if some of his old girls friends were not rather jealous.

A certain motor car is seen travelling down the road, south of the town, quite often of late. Do you suppose the party has found "the girl of his dreams" at last?

We don't suppose many saw the shooting star in town on Sunday night. It seemed to move off the outskirts very rapidly. The girls reported that such a car ride gave them a thrill that comes only once in a lifetime.

We hear that one of the girls while running on Friday night to the restaurant, lost the heel off her shoe. Evidently the lady's father had to fix it, pretty tough on the old folks, eh? when they have to repair the damage done by their sons.

Girls seem to be the weakest weakness of a popular young man of our town. Evidently he believes in safety in numbers as was shown at the Restaurant on Sunday.

All the girls seem to think of nothing but a young man who has just arrived home. He is continually the topic of conversation. We warn you—be careful Earnest.

On Wednesday, Nov. 2nd the marriage was solemnized at the Oyen United Church manse of Miss Elva Barker and Mr. Gerald Wilson, of Sedolis, Rev. J. W. Smyley officiated.

State Medicine's Appeal

State medicine, whether it be in the form of compulsory health insurance, compulsory co-operative medicine or a full fledged state medicine plan, in which the State would have control of the entire field and doctors, nurses and attendants would be salaried civil servants is much in the public eye in Western Canada as well as other countries of the world.

In recent years in Western Canada many organizations have gone on record in support of some form of State medicine on a province-wide basis. Other organizations have appointed committees to make a study of State medicine and all its implications and costs and in some of the provinces legislation has been placed on the statute books providing for the inauguration of a scheme of State medicine at a later date.

It is not at all surprising that the plea for State medicine, in one or other of the forms in which it has or is taking shape should appeal to the popular fancy when one remembers that behind it all is the general principle that when one or other of the mooted plans has been put into operation it will make available to all who are sick or suffering, the alleviation and remedies which medical science has to offer; that the best of medical and surgical skill will be available to all, regardless of their financial status and further, that it will, by the very nature of its scope, extend the field of preventive medicine.

The consummation of these objectives is indeed highly desirable at the earliest possible opportunity. The humanitarianism behind such plans constitutes a powerful appeal to the imagination and this is one of the factors which sway large conventions and groups to make an insistent demand for social reform of this character.

Cost Is A Consideration

Just because a project is highly desirable does not necessarily mean that it is economically feasible and this point is sometimes overlooked in the eagerness of the wish to put it into immediate operation. That there is a strong tide flowing in the direction of some form of compulsory health insurance in many countries of the world, and particularly in the democratic countries, cannot be denied, and it would appear that by evolutionary process it will be brought about in due course in many countries, states and provinces which have so far tasted its benefits on a small scale and in a voluntary way.

Before, however, such beneficial programs are adopted and put into effect, the cost must be counted if there are to be no subsequent regrets. There must not only be a realization of what the cost will be, but also of the source of the necessary funds; in other words who is going to pay and how.

In this connection it is not amiss to point out that the cost of a province-wide scheme, no matter in what form it may be levied, can only come out of the pockets of the people of that province, at any rate until such time as it may be adopted as a national scheme. If a substantial number of the residents of a province have no resources, temporarily or permanently, the entire economic burden must in the meantime fall on the remainder of the citizens of that province. Coupling this fact with the financial condition of a large percentage of the residents of the three prairie provinces during the past few years, the reason why those provinces which have such legislation on their books have not yet put it into effect is not far to seek.

Ability To Pay A Factor

In Saskatchewan where there is, as yet, no state medicine legislation enacted, a compulsory co-operative medicine project designed to provide "free" medical, nursing, hospital and medicinal supplies to the entire population, is finding some favor. The cost per capita is estimated by its sponsors to be $10.82, including a provincial government contribution, or an annual average levy of $48.69 for the average family. How many families in Saskatchewan could this year meet an additional levy of $48.69 on top of other tax levies, or could have done so last year when approximately half the population was on relief? It is a safe venture to assert that neither in 1937 nor in 1938 could such a project have been financed out of current levies.

In Greenbelt, Maryland, where a co-operative community is being operated under the New Deal, an annual levy ranging from $78 for an unmarried man to $117 for a family of six is being collected from the residents to pay their contributions to the Greenbelt Health association which guarantees for its members medical care, preventive and remedial, presumably at cost.

In New Zealand where a full fledged national health service comprising free medical services, with free hospital and sanatorium treatment for everybody, free mental treatment in institutions, free medicine and free maternity care, including the cost of maintenance in special maternity homes, the probable annual cost is estimated by G. H. Maddex, a British government actuary, at $15,000,000 without taking into account substantial additional expenditures of hospital boards for which funds are secured by municipal levies, and it is announced that in making his report Mr. Maddex added the warning that "once hospital accommodation was given free of charge there might well be a greatly increased demand for it, which would increase the cost."

Probably Learned

Thomas Craven, art critic and author, in search of color for a book concerning Southern life, went to the field to learn about picking cotton by working at it for a day. As dusk settled he dragged a long sack to the weighing stand. It contained 20 pounds of cotton. He was paid 12 cents for his day's work.

Unnecessary Work

For more than a century occupiers of a mountain farm at Cressley, six miles from Pembroke, have tramped a mile to fetch drinking water. In times of drought even the well failed, and then water had to be brought from Fishers, three miles away. A water diver has just discovered a spring—at the farmhouse back-door.

Will Take Two Years

For Canada To Get Air Defence Program Under Way

New ships are taking to the air every month as Canada's air defence program takes shape. Hon. Ian MacKenzie said at Ottawa. "Soon we will have the first of our Blackburns (fighters) being manufactured in Vancouver," he added.

About two years will be required to get an air program really under way, said Mr. MacKenzie.

Because matters of defence are state secrets, and because of rigid governmental rules concerning announcement of policy, the Minister of National Defence would give no forecast of what this year's armament budget would be, nor would he draw any conclusions, for Canada, concerning the effect of recent European developments.

But the recent crisis is likely to have a profound effect on the status of the armed forces of Canada, according to a hint he dropped, and according to reports which have circulated in Ottawa since the Munich truce was signed.

"That situation has brought the realization to every one that the demerits seem to be going behind as compared with the liabilities in the matter of armaments," he said. And he added that he believed Canada's air force should be expanded, within our financial limits, and that there would be no relaxation of efforts to build an adequate defence for the Dominion.

Empire Press Meeting

Conference To Be Held In Ottawa In 1940

The council of the Empire Press Union accepted the invitation of J. H. Woods, chairman of Canadian section, to hold the sixth Imperial Press conference in 1940 in Canada. The conference proper, lasting three days, will be held at Ottawa and it is planned delegates will tour the Dominion from coast to coast.

At the council meeting it was agreed Canadian section would be asked to arrange the conference for August or September on the grounds this would be more convenient than the early summer.

The first Imperial Press conference was held in London, the second, held in Canada in 1920, lasted seven weeks, including the cross-country tour. The third conference was in Australia, the fourth in London and the fifth in Cape Town, South Africa.

Gift To Premier King

Explanation Settles Any Doubt About Owner Of Laurier House

Prime Minister King owns Laurier House in Ottawa. Many people think that Laurier House belongs to the Liberal party and is to be the official residence in Ottawa of the leader of the Liberals.

The best explanation of the status of Laurier House comes from none other than Mr. King himself, who says: "Laurier House was given originally to Lady Laurier. It belonged to her, not to Sir Wilfrid. It was left to me by Lady Laurier in her will. I paid the succession duties at the time I became the owner of the house, which I named Laurier House, and, as the owner, have paid taxes ever since."

That should make it clear to anyone who may have wondered just who owns Laurier House it Ottawa.—Windsor Daily Star.

Has Various Duties

Necessary For Australia's Prime Minister To Write To Himself

The Australian Press Bureau says new records are being established by the Prime Minister (Mr. Lyons), who admitted that his varied ministerial duties had required him to write a letter to himself.

In a reminiscent mood, he made a tally of his ministerial job during his long political career, but even now he isn't certain whether the passage of the years may not have made him forget one or two.

At any rate, he remembers that in Tasmania he served as Premier, Treasurer and Minister for Education, Mines, Forests, Hydro-electric Undertakings and Railways, while his Commonwealth career has included the posts of Prime Minister, Treasurer, Vice-President of the Executive Council, Postmaster-General and Minister for Health, Repatriation, Defence, Commerce, Works and Railways.

Recently the Minister for Defence (Mr. Lyons) had a request to make to the Prime Minister (Mr. Lyons) and duly started his letter "My Dear Prime Minister."

He is now waiting a reply from himself, and it is expected that the request will be granted.

Gave Them Great Thrill

People Chosen At Random Remembered Their First Phone Call

An inquiring reporter recently interviewed five people chosen at random and asked if they could remember their first telephone call. The answers were amazing. Because the thrill of it was so great, all but one could recall the experience as if it happened yesterday. The fifth "took the telephone for granted, like street cars, radio, airplanes, motor cars—all are common-place now."

Of the others, one said, "I could hardly speak, and could not hear from excitement." Another stated, "What I heard a voice speak to me over it, I got a funny feeling which I had to describe." A Hamilton subscriber when 12 years old answered the telephone for the first time to hear of the assassination of President McKinley. Can you remember your first telephone call?

SELECTED RECIPES

BRAN MUFFINS
1/2 cup pastry flour
1/2 cup St. Lawrence or Durham Corn Starch
1 cup bran
1 cup Bee Hive Golden Corn Syrup
1/2 cup chopped dates, or raisins, or mixed
1 cup butter or shortening
1 cup sour milk
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1 egg
Mix butter (shortening) and syrup. Add sifted dry ingredients and bran. Mix thoroughly with beaten egg and milk, then fruit. Bake in rather hot oven 10-15 minutes. Sweet milk and three teaspoons baking powder may be used in place of sour milk and soda. Makes one dozen large, or one and a half dozen small.

HARD CANDY
1/2 cup Bee Hive Golden Corn Syrup
1 lb. brown sugar
1 scant cup hot water
Mix all thoroughly and boil without stirring until it forms a very hard ball in cold water. Pour out on well buttered tin. Mark into small squares while still warm. Nice for small children.

Vicious Attack

Only Four Marksmanship Of Japs Saved British Gunboat Sandpiper

Bad Japanese marksmanship alone saved the British Gunboat Sandpiper from the fate of the United States gunboat Panay, bombed and sunk by Japanese planes last December 12, according to eye-witness stories told by members of the Sandpiper's crew. All asserted that the British flag painted on the Sandpiper's bridge was clearly visible when the gunboat was attacked by six Japanese planes.

"I dread to think what would have happened if a direct hit had been scored," one of the officers declared. "We probably would have gone to the bottom like the Panay."

Officers and other members of the crew said the gunboat had been lying at anchor for a full 48 hours before the attack.

"The Sandpiper was lying peacefully at anchor waiting for a court-y call when a heavy drone overhead announced the arrival of Japanese planes," one sailor said.

"Six heavy bombers, flying in perfect arrowhead formation, passed low overhead. Hardly had they passed when, to the consternation of everyone, they suddenly veered around and, with engines roaring, the whole flight made a mass dive at the Sandpiper."

"Those on board and on land were horrified. They just stood helplessly where they were. They were unable to understand what was happening, or what was likely to happen."

"When the planes reached what seemed only a few feet above the Sandpiper each machine released one bomb, which sped toward the ship with a swishing noise. Fortunately, all but one bomb fell very wide of their mark."

"The bomb that did the actual damage did not actually hit the Sandpiper. It exploded so near, however, that fragments rattled aboard, tearing holes in two cabins and smashing down the hatch. The planes then flew away."

Colonial Representation

Suggestion Made That Britain Should Follow Italy's Example

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express suggested Great Britain should follow Italy's example in granting representation to her colonies in the nation's councils.

The Fascist grand council in Rome derided the North African colony of Libya should become an integral part of Italy. France for many years has given her colonial representation in the French parliament.

"If Jamaica and Trinidad had sent representatives to voice opinions at Westminster during the last few years their lives would have been less troubled," the paper said. "We would have heard about their grievances from the floor of the House of Commons, not from newspaper reports of disturbances in those colonies." The paper cited other cases where an airing in the commons might have facilitated a settlement.

"There is no longer any practical reason why the colonies should not be represented in London," it added. "We can link this country and our African and West Indian possessions by means of air so that the journey is reduced to a matter of hours."

"You didn't have a rag on your back when I married you," he said. "Anyway," she replied, "I've plenty now."

How to Ease

CHEST COLD MISERY

First—massage throat, chest, and back with Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. This relaxes the muscles. THEN—to make its long-continued action last even longer, spread a thick layer of VapoRub on the chest and cover with a warm cloth. LONG AFTER sleep comes, VapoRub keeps working—loosens phlegm—clears muscular soreness or tightness—clears air-passages—eases coughing—relieves lung congestion. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

VICKS VAPORUB

According to Science

Milk Is More Digestible If You Drink It Quickly

The Communist Magazine says one of America's top superstitions about milk gets a swift kick from science. Time and time again people have warned you to drink your milk slowly and in sips so that it will digest more easily. However, recent clinical experiments conducted in Germany prove the opposite to be true. The scientists find that milk drunk slowly engenders more extensive curdling and is therefore more indigestible than if drunk at a faster rate. A group of large milk curdles, it seems, is more easily acted upon by the digestive juices than a large number of small ones. This just goes to show how smart you really were as a youngster when you wanted to down that glass of milk in one gulp and mother would not let you.

New Cause Of Deafness

May Be Due To Misaligned Jaws States Doctor

A new treatment to cure deafness was related to the Detroit Chapter of the American Society for the Hard of Hearing as National Hearing Week got under way at Detroit.

Dr. J. K. Lyons, of Jackson, Mich., told Society members many cases of deafness were caused by abnormal relations between the jaws. Repositioning of the jaws, the dentist said, often would entirely eliminate deafness.

"There is a definite need of further research in this field," Dr. Lyons said. "There is no agency in the country devoted to the work. In the case of little children, when this abnormality is discovered early enough, it is possible to cure deafness immediately."

The Newest Wrapping

Old Shoes Made Into Artistic Material In Beautiful Shades

A process of turning old shoes of waste leather into a durable and beautiful transparent wrapping has been discovered. McGill University scientists disclose.

They have been advised that the waste leather is first steam-treated and then subjected to several chemical processes which turn it into a transparent wrapping, colored to lend beautiful shades to the articles it contains. The new type wrapping, they said, can be made very cheaply, because the basic product used is waste material.

Hammond swiftly crossed the lowland toward Loom creek. The workers along the stream passed in a blur. Far ahead he sighted two men walking along the opposite bank. Hammond began to run. Then, disregarding the rough bridge ahead, he plunged into the stream. Waist deep, he swirled through it and clambered over the other side. Then, dripping, he rushed forward.

Lew Snade turned his weak face at the sound of his approach. Then, suddenly gray-faced, he begged: "Let me alone—let me alone!"

Hammond had growled, his big arms had outstretched; now he was on the man, bending him in his grasp. "Give me that money!" he commanded.

"Look here!" Kenning exclaimed, as he turned back. "What's all this about?"

Hammond gave no heed. "Hear me!" he shouted at Lew Snade. "Give me that money!"

"You're all wrong. I haven't got any money!" The weak-fettered Snade had caught the distended wrists of the miser and was hanging to them desperately. Hammond bulged his heavy shoulders; Snade rose in his grasp, legs dangling like those of a dummy.

"Shall I choke it out of you?" he asked. Quickly he threw the man from him, then rushed him for a new grip, his muscular fingers wide-spread. Snade struck out at him, wildly; Hammond gave no evidence that he felt the blow. Now his hands, distorted with muscle, plowed deep into Snade's throat.

"Look out, Jack!" Kenning shouted. "You'll kill him!"

"What of it?" growled the prospector. Then to Snade, "Give me that money!" Lew Snade writhed helplessly, gasping. "You know what I mean; that money you stole from Jeanne Towers." Lew Snade hesitated only a second longer. Then he raised his weak hands and pointed to his throat. Slowly, Hammond relaxed his grip. The man staggered about, with sagging knees. "Well, get it! Don't stand there stalling. Get out that money!"

Snade, still reeling, pawed for his pockets. Currency, the nuggets, the phial of goldstuck; slowly he passed them over into the waiting hands of Jack Hammond. The prospector turned to Bruce Kenning.

"What's this rat to you?"

"Why—nothing. We were just talking about a job."

"Be sure it's never anything more than that." Black with rage, he turned to the gasping Snade. "Now you—get over there on the Alaskan side. And stay there. Do you understand?"

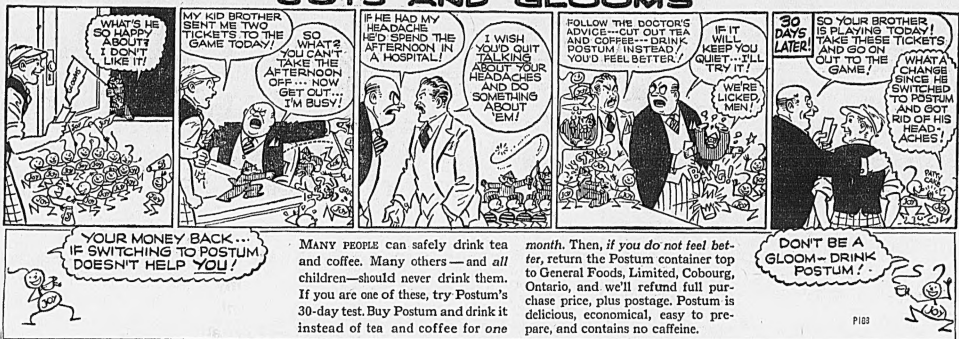

Slowly the man began to move away, in the direction of the uncompleted buildings of Around the World Annie's dance hall.

A half hour later, his clothing still soggy from the crossing of the creek, he walked slowly down toward Kay's claim. Something of calmness had come now, balminess and amazement. For the first time in his life, he had wanted to kill a man, and he had not known why. All he could realize was that a blind, murderous rage had held him, until at last Jeanne Towers' children's coughs.

money was safe in his hands and he was hurrying back to her cabin with it.

CHAPTER VII.

Around the World Annie strode what passed as the streets of Sapphire Lake upon an important mission. Summer half-come now, with its hot days, and almost incessant light; Annie was dressed for it. Timmy Moon had brought her quite a wardrobe on his last trip and Annie was displaying a sample. A long period of expenditure was over; now she could name the value to this little northern world that she was about to reap the profits.

Now and then Around the World Annie paused in supreme survey, for she was here on business. Preceding her, as she went through town, were two men with hammers, an arm full of placards, printed in Vancouver, and a mouthful of tacks. Gradually they were turning the drabness of cabin exteriors to screaming blasts of white and scarlet.

—Wahoope, Alaska—10 p.m.—Thursday, July Fourth

"Wrote that all my myself," explained Around the World Annie, to a quickly thickening throng of admirers. "Ain't bad for an old gal, eh?"

Among the many who paused to read was a stocky, bespectacled man with a cane who had borne the shadows of deep worry. All had not gone well for McKenzie Joe during these last few months. He had been forced to watch a tremendous change engulf the young man whom he long ago had come to regard with an overprotective affection.

But McKenzie Joe never had been diplomatic. He was doing more in that direction now than ever before. At least, he kept his mouth tight when every atom of his supremely honest nature shouted to him to have a show-down and proclaim that he was tired of being dealt cards from a stacked deck. Something was wrong; he felt sure of it. His distrust of Jay Joyce and Bruce Kenning amounted almost to mania.

Not that Joe blamed Jack for being blind. It was a natural condition; the North makes a man snow-blind or woman-blind and either affliction is hard to cure. Jack Hammond was not the first person McKenzie Joe had seen take to climbing trees at the will of a woman. He could remember a few experiences of his own. All prospectors can.

The placards announcing Annie's great premiere were still fresh in his mind as he turned into Jeanne's store.

"Listen," he announced, "I need some new nuds. Can you get 'em by 'phone'?"

"If you'll give me your measurements," Jeanne replied, "I've got an order going in on a 'plane tomorrow.' That's easy. Forty-four chest for the coat, thirty-six waist and thirty-one legs for the pants. If the sleeves are too long, I'll turn 'em up. Then, without a break. 'How's business?" "Rushing," answered Jeanne, writing down the measurements.

"Fine," McKenzie Joe looked sourly into the distance, only to turn back as quickly. "Say," he asked, peering hard into her face. "You and me always have been good friends. I think a lot of you."

"Thanks, Joe."

"If Jack Hammond had any sense—" "Do you have any particular color you'd like for this suit?" Jeanne broke in.

"Well, I guess not. I'd kind of partial to blue. Not that dead kind of blue you know. Something kind of lively."

"That's my color. I want 'em to know I'm coming. And get me a couple of shirts. White, I guess. And a tie with some red in it—not all red. I'm going over to Around the World Annie's on the Fourth of July."

"Wearing red, white and blue," chuckled Jeanne.

"Might as well be neighborly," he said.

Joe?" His tone bore the portent of impending calamity. McKenzie shouldered his pick and shovel.

"What's wrong about that? You went down to Seattle and got drunk, didn't you?"

"I figure if one partner's got a right to get drunk, the other one's got the same privilege."

"Yes, I guess you have, Joe," Hammond's features were clouded. The elder man started away, then paused.

"I see you on the upper flat yesterday afternoon with a couple of men. What were you doing?"

It was the last question Jack desired to answer.

"Oh, just looking around."

"In other words, figuring out a place to test that wild-eyed theory of yours, that the Big Moose swung over toward the B.C. hills, that?"

"Well—since you put it that way. And you didn't take me into your confidence."

"I've tried to talk to you about it a dozen times," the younger man said desperately.

"And I've tried to talk you out of it. But there's somebody else, stronger I am."

Trade Conquest In China

Japanese Merchants Getting A Strangle-Hold On Business.

Japan has started the second phase of her conquest of China—the job of knitting conquered areas into the Rising Sun Empire.

Japanese diplomats, merchants, builders, professional men, promoters and propagandists have followed close on the heels of her advancing armies bent on drawing profit and power from the territory where 200,000,000 Chinese have been brought under Japanese sway.

They are faced with passive resistance of China's millions, active resistance of night-riding guerrilla armies in the north, and pressure from neutral powers attempting to stop the closing of the open door to trade.

But the pace of political and economic penetration has quickened under the guidance of puppet governments created from Tokyo.

Trade monopolies have been established in North China and Inner Mongolia. Neutral interests have been kept out of the Yangtze River valley because of "military necessity."

A "greater Shanghai" building plan is under way which would make the once important International Settlement of Shanghai a small, neutral island surrounded by a huge Japanese-dominated Chinese community.

At the same time, an educational and cultural program to paint a Japanese complexion on the face of conquered territories has been launched.

A new joint Chinese-Japanese motion picture company, expected to have a monopoly on importation of films, is being formed under sponsorship of the Japanese, Manchoukuo, North China, provincial and central Chinese governments.

Foreign business men in Peiping and Tientsin report that once-profitable trade with Inner Mongolia now is impossible for their firms.

Hits Were Scored

Although Windsor Castle Was "Blackened-Out" For Test Raid

Historic Windsor Castle, seat of kings since the days of William the Conqueror, was "blackened out" for 45 minutes in an air-raid test. The first raid on the castle, supposedly built on the site of King Arthur's meeting place with the Knights of the Round Table, resulted in "bumble" scoring hits on the state apartments and the sovereign's entrance.

A friend of ours, says The New Yorker, who is normal in every respect but his height (five feet one inch) went shopping, as circumstances have forced him to, in the boys' department of a large store the other day and was on his way out when a salesman caught him by the sleeve. "You forgot your balloon," he said, with a big, brotherly smile. "Goes with every purchase, you know." Before our friend realized what was happening, he was out on the street with a package in one hand and a large red balloon, with a cat's face painted on it, in the other. It had ears, too.

Fast War Planes

United States Planning To Meet Air Rivalry In Europe

A six-mile-a-minute war plane is the United States army's answer to European rivalry for speed supremacy in the air.

A 360-mile flight in 61 minutes from Dayton, Ohio, to Buffalo, N.Y., by Lieut. Benjamin S. Kelsey lifted the wraps from a pursuit ship about which the air corps previously had little to say.

The plane, the Curtiss P-37, already has passed the experimental stage. An initial squadron of 13 ordered last December soon will be delivered, officials said.

Without halting to gloat over the P-37, the army intends to announce in a few days another and presumably even faster plane. Designated the P-40, it is an experimental job, and most details will not be disclosed for the present.

Both Germany and Great Britain have combat planes which have even greater speed than that attained by the P-37. But the air corps has a ready answer.

Lieutenant Kelsey's flight and earlier trials, which were kept secret, were made with full military equipment. Germany claimed some 380 miles an hour for its Messerschmitt. Although Britain's Spitfire exceeded 400 miles an hour, it was aided by a tailwind.

Gettysburg Survivor

Colonel John Wesley Miller Dies At Peterborough, Ont.

Colonel John Wesley Miller, one of the few Canadian survivors of the historic battle of Gettysburg and a veteran of the Fenian Raids, died recently at Peterborough, Ont. He marked his 93rd birthday October 14.

One of 30,000 Canadians who fought with the American Federal army at Gettysburg, he attended last July the 75th anniversary celebration of the battle. Only 500 Canadians and Americans attended, virtually all the survivors of the thousands of soldiers who fought. He began his military career early, enlisting at the age of 15 in the 6th regiment of the U.S. Cavalry in 1861.

He was the only survivor of 220 stout-hearted young soldiers who marched 67 years ago with the "Polaris" regiment to fight the Fenian raiders at Ridgeway. Private Miller soon won his commission in the regiment, later known as the 57th. Promotions followed gradually and in 1893 he became the fifth colonel of the regiment. He continued as officer commanding until 1914 when most of his men went overseas.

Demand For Good Music

Is Being Met To-day By Radio And Talking Pictures

Talking pictures and the radio have already developed a musical appreciation on the part of the public which could not have been effected in 20 years of formal education. This music appreciation has brought about not only the acceptance of, but the demand for, the finest in the works of our composers.

The sound engineers who have developed recording and reproduction to its present state have made it possible to give such music to the public, for to-day the finest symphony orchestra or the greatest voice can be brought with true fidelity to the theatre audience.

With this perfect sound reproduction and an active music appreciation on the part of the public, the composer in talking pictures has the opportunity to present his work under the best possible hearing conditions, to audience whose response assures him a return which should make the field attractive to him.

But it is in the creation of the great dramatic musical scores, in the handling of operatic material, and the placing of work of great composers before the public in musicals, that the screen is doing its really important work in the field of music.

Behind The Times

He had lived all his life in a small village. This was his first visit to London. Walking into a City post office, he said: "Half a pound of mail, please."

"We don't sell him," replied an amused official.

"Yo diana?" exclaimed the villager in surprise. "Yere awful behind the times here. In the post office where I come from they sell ham, apples, freighters, eggs, and a hundred other things."

Wheat Deliveries 95,000,000

With the exception of a few fields of coarse grain, harvesting has been completed throughout Alberta, grain companies report. In fact, coarse grains of any value have already been harvested, they stated, leaving occasional stacks which the farmers believe would not pay for threshing. General harvesting was over 10 days ago in Southern Alberta.

Wheat deliveries in the province are now approaching 95,000,000 bushels, according to estimates. Delivery of coarse grains, however, has been comparatively low, due largely to the low prices prevalent.

As harvesting subsides, farm laborers start to flock into the cities. According to the local employment service, there is a fair demand for men under the farm placement scheme. So far as can be ascertained, casual laborers have had more work this fall owing to improved weather. There are a number, however, who still need either work or assistance.

The Amateur Contest And Dance at Chinook Consolidated School

The Amateur Contest and Dance held at Chinook School Friday evening, Nov. 4th, was a splendid success. Under the capable chairmanship of our genial gentleman pastor, Mr. Whaley, not a second of the concert time was wasted.

Although some are of the opinion that Mr. Whaley's roll should have been judged first it was impossible to do so as he was not in competition. The judges, Mrs. Smiley, Miss Haddigan and Miss Taylor of Oyen, awarded first place to Ray Coley for his excellent reading; second to Ethelene Hille for a piano solo and third to Bernice Rasmussen with an accordion solo.

The Charlie McCarthy doll was won by Mrs. Nichols of Lanfane.

Last but not least was the wonderful good performance by the Physical Training class which cannot be too highly commented. The pupils deserve great praise, and their teacher, Mr. Morrell is to be complimented on being such an efficient physical training teacher.

The committee reports that more than enough was cleared to pay for the film slide machine and would like to take this opportunity of thanking all who helped to make this such a success.

Many a clerk or secretary or civil servant, says an article, dreams of making money by novel writing.

So does many a novelist. Movie director: "The star wants five hundred dollars for playing the part of an Indian in our new film."

Manager: "Offer him two hundred and fifty. Tell him he's only got to be a half breed."

The pupil was stumped by the following question: "State the number of tons of coal shipped out of England in any given year."

Finally he had an inspiration. He wrote: "50 B. C. — none."
